

Marion Cage's newest collection of "jewelry for furniture" debuts at ICFE

The rigor of architecture and the opulence of jewelry meet in the designer's newest collection of fine cabinetry hardware Booth 2550

(New Orleans, May 4, 2015-- ) Architect and jewelry designer, Marion Cage McCollam, principal of New Orleans-based design studio, Marion Cage, launches her newest collection of fine cabinetry hardware later this month at ICFE, booth 2550.

The collection started at a much smaller scale as jewelry, inspired in part by the geometries McCollam was first introduced to while working in the office of the late Zaha Hadid, whose sudden and tragic passing moved McCollam to name the collection "Peak", in honor of Hadid's groundbreaking design for the Peak Athletic Club in Hong Kong. McCollam's use of 3-D modeling software enabled her to scale, modify and adapt her jewelry designs into a collection cabinetry pulls and knobs.

Peak simultaneously evokes the faceted forms of jewelry and the clean lines of architecture. Consisting of six styles, each piece is made to order – hand cast and finished to exacting detail and offered in a stunning array of metals and finishes. The designer's eye for and attention to detail is particularly evident in the subtle mix of finishes used throughout.

McCollam's holistic approach toward design, another thing for which she credits Hadid's influence, often allows for concepts and designs migrate across disciplines. Her work as a jewelry designer is widely appreciated for its architectural sensibility, so it was only natural for her jewelry designs to find their way into her cabinetry hardware.
